1 Dragonfly in Paradise

225 W Maple

Artists: Kelly and Ty Tompkins

The mural serves as a reminder to live life to the fullest. The Fiesta Hibiscus flowers represent respect, love, friendship, family, and feminine energy. Some feel a dragonfly is a visitor from heaven. With #2s in the eyes, it's a tribute to SPC Kaleb George who was 22 when he became 1 of 22 veterans we lose each day to suicide. Like this mural, Kaleb was bright, bold, vibrant, colorful, engaging and inspirational.

The Enid News & Eagle is pleased to present this glossy guide to Enid's unique and amazing public art: murals, sculptures, statues and more.

When you drive around Enid, you will find a wonderful gallery of fine art that everyone can enjoy. Enid has more than 100 murals, statues and monuments that are visible to the public simply walking or driving by or easily accessed inside public places. In this edition, we've also included a few harder-to-find gems, including at Vance Air Force Base and inmate paintings on walls of the old county courthouse jail (yes, the paintings are really good!).

Art in this guide represents the work of more than two dozen artists. Some of the most prolific locally are Kelly and Ty Tompkins and Tox Murillo. We also make special note of the significant contributions by H Holden, who died in 2023 but leaves an impressive legacy with his bronze sculptures in Enid and throughout Oklahoma. But art can be pleasing no matter who the artist – even children. We have added art painted by schoolchildren during a library summer reading program.

The popularity of murals has exploded over the last several years, and new art may pop up in Enid at any time. This guide with its addresses and map should be extremely useful.

Public art enhances the visual appeal of a community and has a positive impact on people going about their everyday lives. Cast critters along a walking trail may put a smile on your face. The vibrant colors of many murals are known to create a feeling of energy. Public art can transform a dull or neglected area into a visually appealing space. Still other artwork reminds us of our city's unique history.

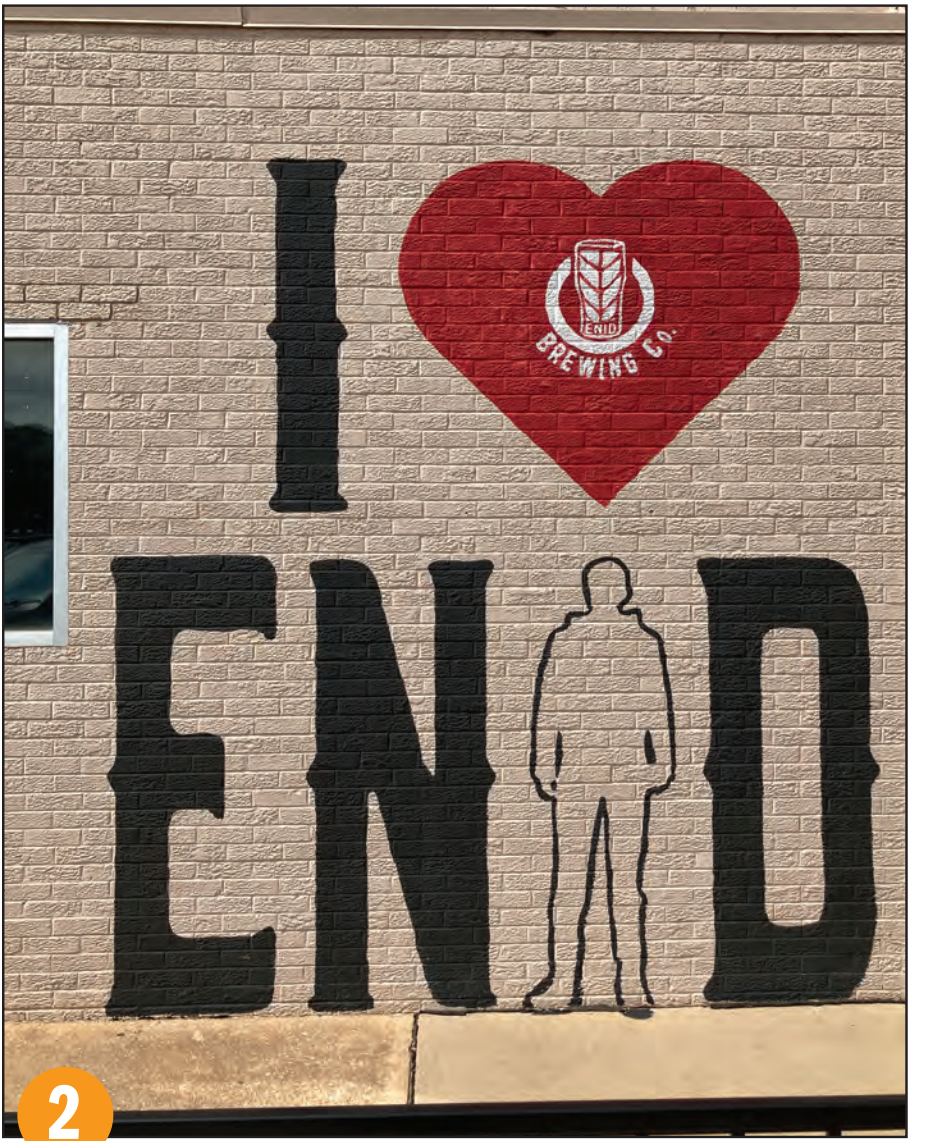

We want to give special acknowledgement to Rob Houston of Visit Enid, Kelly Tompkins and Tox Murillo for helping us document as many works of local art as possible. Special thanks also to LynnDe Funk and Kathy Young for photography and layout work, making this artwork look great in your hands.

What you have here is a great compilation of public art in Enid. Now, the rest is up to you. Get out and enjoy!

Public art sparks inspiration

By Rob Houston
Visit Enid Director

Did you know there's research showing many key health benefits to having public art in a destination? It reduces anxiety and improves moods, it strengthens community identity by connecting the past, present and future, fostering collective memory and civic pride.

Public art also directly supports cultural tourism and economic development strategies, improving Enid's chances at attracting new and visiting populations. People come to Enid just to see the art, which provides economic impact for our city, and it shows residents and visitors that Enid cares about the culture and wellbeing of its citizens.

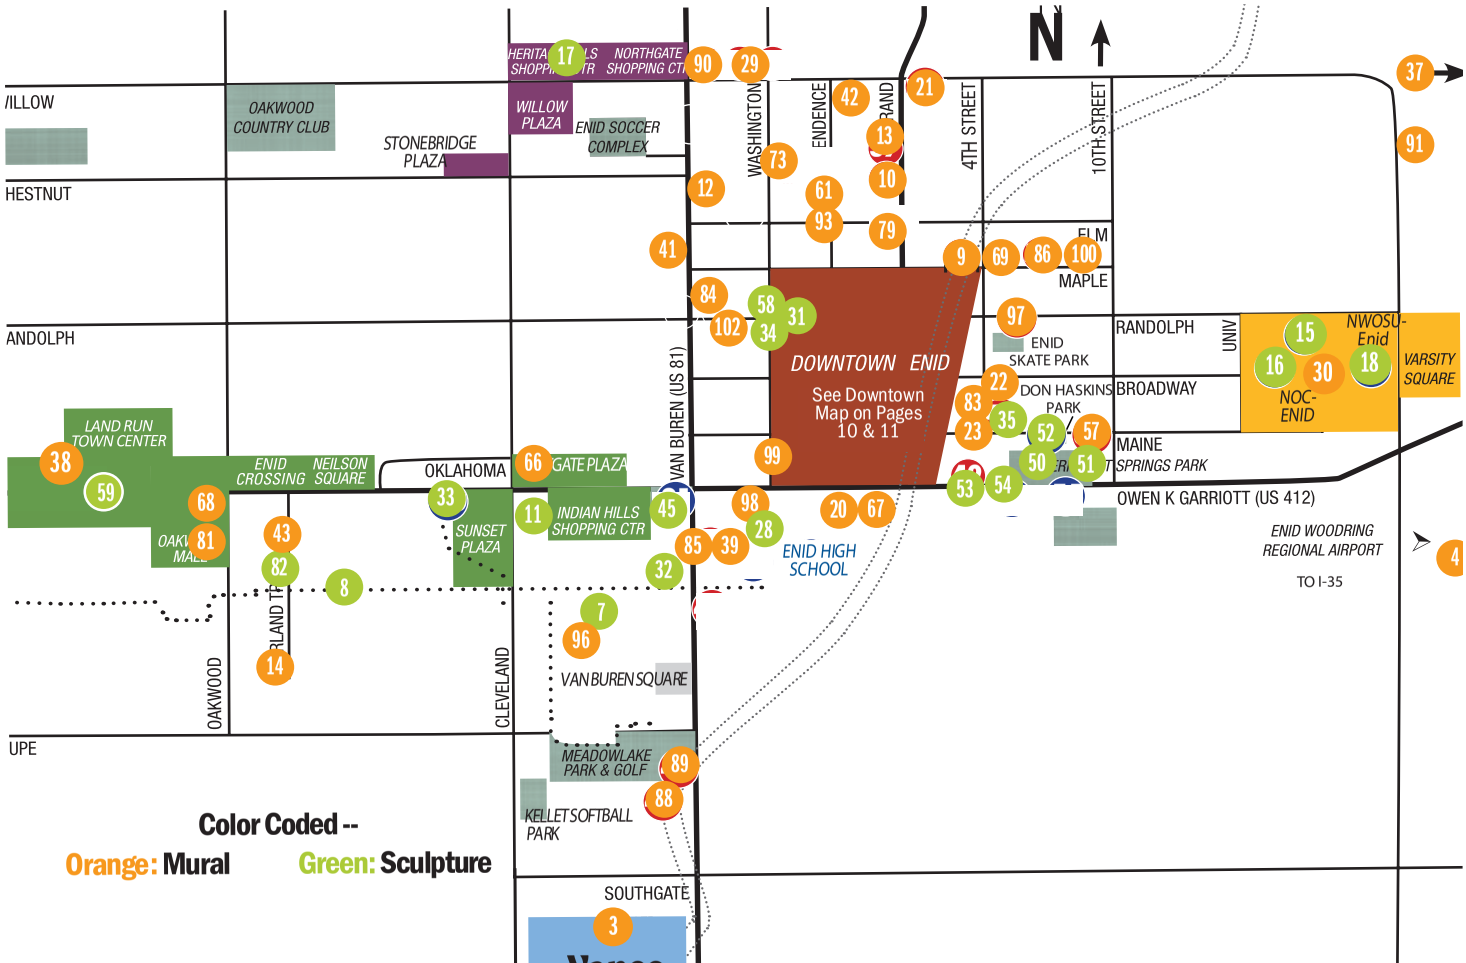

This is the third edition of the Enid Public Art Guide from the Enid News & Eagle, and once again, Visit Enid is proud to serve as title sponsor. Our website, VisitEnid.org, promotes Enid's visitor assets, including retail, restaurants, festivals and events, and yes, its public art. We realize today's workforce is looking for quality of life and quality of place, and it is those visitor assets, including our public art, making those qualities possible in Enid.

Public art has a variety of effects on cities, places and people. It creates experiences that are seen, felt, heard, touched or sensed. It transforms public spaces. Use this guide to take an art walk (or drive) through our city. You'll find a mural or sculpture in Enid that will make you smile, cringe, amuse, confuse or maybe even make you think. That's okay. That's public art.

ART IN ENID
WHERE CREATIVITY BUILDS COMMUNITY

Enid's creative energy is one of its greatest strengths. From colorful murals to live performances and local installations, the arts are woven into the fabric of our community—bringing people together and giving our city its unique character.

Beyond their beauty, the arts play a powerful role in strengthening connection. Studies consistently show that engaging with art—whether by creating it or simply experiencing it—can reduce feelings of isolation, spark meaningful conversations, and build a stronger sense of community. When residents take part in the creative process, those benefits grow even deeper.

The arts also support Enid's economic vitality. Public art and cultural events draw visitors, generate local spending, and help position our city as a vibrant place to live, work, and invest. Murals, in particular, have become visual landmarks—enhancing public spaces and increasing Enid's visibility and appeal.

Urban designer Mitchell Reardon describes impactful public spaces as creating "community fingerprints"—places that reflect who we are and foster pride, connection, and a sense of belonging. In Enid, these creative spaces are helping shape our identity and strengthen our neighborhoods.

The arts inspire us, connect us, and make our community feel like home. Whether you're an artist, a supporter, or simply curious, there's a place for you in Enid's creative scene. Step out, explore, and be part of the energy—because in Enid, art isn't just something you see. It's something you feel.
